POINT. CLICK. TRANSPORT. AND DISPOSE.

The Internet is setting a new standard for how business is conducted in the waste management industry. And Capitol Environmental Services, Inc. (CESI) is at the forefront of this technological revolution.

SMART SOLUTIONS

At CESI, we recognize the opportunity to apply Internet technology to develop smart and innovative waste management solutions that expand our range of services, enhance the level and quality of support, and meet our customers' evolving information management and purchasing requirements. The result is EnvironexusSM, an e-commerce brokerage network for hazardous and non-hazardous waste, off-spec materials, by-products, or any other materials that are generated by a company but which do not have an established or fixed market.

As a single point of access, EnvironexusSM efficiently manages all activities involved in the transfer of waste materials including profile management, contract negotiation, shipment tracking, document management, invoicing, and compliance reporting. Each transaction is conducted via the Internet in a safe, secure, and private environment. CESI's information-rich network is the first and only commercially available Internet service or software application to offer this range of functionality to the waste management industry.

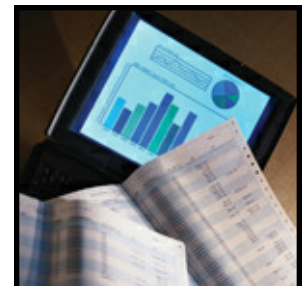

"At Capitol, it is our mission to be the leading waste management services company to both customers and vendors by removing inefficiencies from the waste management supply chain, lowering environmental risk, and improving the productivity of environmental management professionals."

President and CEO

PRODUCTIVE PARTNERSHIPS

EnvironexusSM enables its members, including generators, vendors, transporters, contractors, and brokers, to work together on one central platform, integrating the waste management process from end-to-end. CESI's network facilitates collaboration and builds productive partnerships between generators and vendors, allowing them to leverage a wide range of support services and expertise as well as reduce costs through volume pricing with other online participants. In addition, members can track their waste shipments through our virtual "glass pipeline" diminishing their liability, while streamlining information management and significantly reducing related administrative costs.

EnvironexusSM is built around a system that allows members to manage their plants, staff members, privileges, profiles, approved trading partners, and other critical business information with ease right from their desktop. Since our network can be easily integrated with existing environmental management systems and platforms, members can also generate customized reports related to project management, regulatory management, and cost accounting quickly and easily. And, by establishing rules determined by the members themselves, this valuable information can be consolidated and shared among plants, corporate managers, or even trading partners from other companies with the simple click of a mouse.

QUICK AND EASY ACCESS

And the best part? No additional software or hardware is required, except for a Web browser and Internet access. Our members do not have to download or maintain software on their computer desktops or worry about software compatibility, licenses, or upgrades. It is that easy.

Members participating in EnvironexusSM can utilize an extensive network of approved, qualified vendors to manage their waste more efficiently. With EnvironexusSM, CESI has taken an important and unprecedented step in bringing the benefits of Internet technology to the waste management industry. Reducing costs and liabilities. Improving operational efficiencies. Increasing the bottom line.
